Teacher Resume: Key Points to Remember

Draft a Clear Header with your Contact Information

Your header is the first thing recruiters notice when reviewing your teaching resume. Make sure to include all the relevant things, such as:

- Name - Your full name should be written at the top and should be bold and prominent.
- Mobile Number - Adding a reliable mobile number to your resume is one of the most essential details you shouldn't miss.
- Email Address - Mention a professional email address
- LinkedIn Profile - To demonstrate professionalism, include a link to your LinkedIn profile and ensure it is updated.
- Portfolio / Professional website - A link to your portfolio or website, if any, would be beneficial to reflect credibility.

Professional Summary or Objective

This section involves a brief statement that highlights your experience as a teacher and key strengths tailored to the specific teaching position you are applying for. You can also briefly describe what you are looking for in the current role and how you hope to contribute.

An empathetic high school teacher with over 6 years of hands-on student teaching experience. Proficient in using digital tools to enhance student engagement in the classroom and to improve academic performance. Passionate about developing a collaborative classroom environment supporting the growth of each student.

The Importance of a Headshot

Adding a professional and appropriate headshot to your teacher's resume is an important step in creating your own personal brand. It can make you more memorable in the sea of applicants. It may also display confidence and transparency in who you are as a candidate and, most importantly, as a teacher.

Now that we know that a headshot is essential in your resume, there is another important thing you need to keep in mind before uploading your headshot. It is the quality of your headshot. You need to make sure that your headshot is professional and appealing to the eyes. You may get help from the expertise of a professional photographer.

But let me tell you a secret! You can click a professional headshot right from the comfort of your own home. Yes, you heard that right. JustHeadshots AI brings you a tool where you just have to upload 6-8 straight photos of yourself, choose a relevant background, and wait for AI to do the magic! Visit the website here.

Mention your Education & Qualifications

This section plays an important role in your resume. Your education and qualifications define how fit you are for your next role as a teacher. These are the things you should not forget to mention on your resume:

- Your most recent degree (Bachelor's or Master's)
- Your certifications (Teaching License, ESL certifications)

- Professional Development Courses (Online Courses or Workshops)
- The college or organization
- Years of study

Education:

- Master of Education (M.Ed.), Curriculum & Instruction, University of Chicago – 2025
- Bachelor of Arts in English, University of California – 2019

Certifications:

- State Teaching Certification, Grades 7-12 English – Issued 2020
- Google Certified Educator Level 1 – 2025
- ESL Endorsement – 2024

Highlight your Teaching Experience

This is the next part of your resume that adds up to your credibility as a teacher. Completely focus on your teaching roles. Describe your responsibilities and achievements using bullet points. Don't forget to list the name of the school and the organisation as well as the work start and end dates.

Tip: Include quantifiable results to create your mark and stand out from the others applying for the same position.

Student Teacher (Grade 7) | Lincoln Middle School, Chicago, IL | January – May 2025

- As a teacher, designed and implemented science lessons for middle schoolers that enabled them to grasp the learning well.
- Increased student engagement by 30% through interactive and hands-on activities and learning guides.
- Created lessons for diverse learners, including those with special needs. Used assistive technologies and fostered individualized support.
- Took efforts to collaborate with fellow teachers to create interdisciplinary projects to encourage critical thinking and creativity in young students.
- Improved essay grades of young learners by 10% as a result of after-school writing workshops.

But, what if you are just starting out on your career as a teacher with no experience? We've got you covered! You should not leave the whole experience section blank if you have no experience. You could add experiences that involved elements of teaching, such as working with others, taking care of someone, or freelancing tutoring you were a part of.

Focus on your Skills and Achievements

In this section of your resume, you can highlight both the hard skills (technical skills) and the soft skills (personal qualities) such as classroom management, technology integration, and communication you possess. These days, employers look for teachers who can quickly adapt to modern teaching methods, so your skills can add value to your resume.

What you can include:

- Teaching skills - Skills such as classroom management, lesson planning, and assessment techniques
- Technology skills - Your familiarity with learning management systems, edtech platforms, and digital platforms can be beneficial for your resume
- Soft Skills - Skills like leadership, communication, and emotional intelligence are the much needed soft skills for the role of a teacher

Core Teaching Skills:

- Differentiated Instruction
- Assessment and Feedback
- Curriculum Design
- Parent-Teacher Communication

Technology Skills:

- Google Classroom, Microsoft Teams, Zoom
- EdTech Tools: Kahoot, Quizlet, Seesaw
- Learning Management Systems (Canvas, Blackboard)

Soft Skills:

- Collaboration and Teamwork
- Adaptability
- Emotional Intelligence
- Problem-Solving
- Leadership and Mentoring

Additional tips for writing a Teachers Resume

1. Use Action Words - Using Action words in your resume is of great importance. Start each bullet point with strong and impactful verbs like led, developed, created, etc. This will add weight to your resume making you stand out from the rest.
2. Proofread - A resume is a professional document, and any grammatical or spelling errors might demonstrate a lack of professionalism on your part. Therefore, before submitting your resume, scan it thoroughly for any errors. If possible, have a friend check through it once because two are always better than one!
3. Use keywords - This is an important step not only for teacher jobs but also for any other job. Your hiring managers want to understand how you can help the students on a particular subject. To understand this, they might just scan through some target keywords. To stand out, look through the job description for relevant keywords and include them in your resume. This way, you can also beat the Applicant Tracking Systems and pave the way for becoming a teacher.

Examples of a Teachers Resume

Conclusion

An impactful teacher resume is the key to advancing in your teaching career. The tips suggested in this blog, along with your headshot, are a few key points that you need to make sure of when crafting your teacher resume. By highlighting your experience, certifications, and other notable points, you can demonstrate to your hiring managers why you would be fit for this role. And, of course, using your professional headshot in your resume will take your career to new heights.
