

How to make your resume stand out with Achievements & Skills?

Your resume is your professional identity. You need to advertise your skills & achievements, or in other words, make the best things known to others. Including achievements and skills in a resume is important because they showcase your capabilities & accomplishments to potential employers.

Achievements demonstrate your ability to deliver results, while skills highlight what you bring to the table in terms of expertise & qualifications. Together, they provide a comprehensive picture of your suitability for the job.

If you are worried about how to go on with including these in your resume, PaintMinds is here to your rescue. With a team of Experts & Career Mentors build a recruiter friendly resume according to the latest trends of your industry. This blog will guide you through the steps on how to include achievements & key skills to your resume.

How To Make Your Resume Stand Out:

Use Action Words

While screening a resume, recruiters often try to look for Action words. These words help to quantify your resume achievements & try to provide a better understanding of your capabilities.

You can take the help of the following action words to showcase your achievements in a way that attracts maximum attention & make your resume stand out from the crowd:

- Adapted
- Planned
- Revised
- Explored
- Accomplished
- Formulated

Focus on the results

While demonstrating your achievements & skills on your resume, focus on the results. Quantify your achievements with percentages or specific outcomes.

For instance, instead of just saying “Increased Sales Revenue” you can mention the percentage of the increase like, “Increased Sales Revenue by 40% at my previous company.”

This will help the recruiters to scale your progress & also gives them a clear understanding of your contributions.

Tailor Achievements to the Job

Tailoring your achievements & skills to the job you are applying for, helps to demonstrate alignment with the requirements of the position. Look for key skills & qualifications the employer is looking for in the job description.

Accordingly, relate your achievements to those mentioned in the job description. This will show the employer that you have the skills & accomplishments they need to excel in the role they are offering.

Include Skills & Accomplishments in different sections

Including achievements in different sections of the resume helps to provide a comprehensive picture of your capabilities & accomplishments. You can mention your skills & accomplishments in various sections of the resume like the headline, experience, education, etc.

Tailoring achievements to specific sections of your resume ensures that they are directly related to the skills & experiences highlighted in that section thus demonstrating your versatility. It also boosts effectiveness by providing targeted, evidence-based demonstrations of your skills, experiences, & accomplishments.

Use the CAR Method

The CAR Method stands for Challenge, Action & Result. By using this method, you can demonstrate the impact of your previous work.

List down the challenges you faced at your previous role. Think about the problems that required a huge number of time & skills to solve.

Next, ask yourself, ‘What did I do to tackle the situation?’, ‘What strategy did I use?’ The answer to these questions can help you determine what you can include in this section.

Mention quantifiable results. As mentioned earlier, recruiters look for action words, so use them along with impactful evidence.

Concise & Relevant

Showcasing your achievements & skills does not mean you have to exaggerate them. By keeping it short, you can ensure that each achievement you include is significant & impactful. Long lists of achievements can dilute the impact of each individual accomplishment.

Keeping the achievements section short allows you to highlight your most impressive accomplishments effectively, increasing your chances of making a strong impression on potential employers.

Conclusion

Including achievements in your resume is essential for effectively showcasing your qualifications, differentiating yourself from other candidates & convincing employers of your value as a potential hire.

They help to provide concrete evidence of your capabilities thus ensuring credibility & making your resume stand out from the other candidates.

Keywords: Key skills for resume | Making resume stand out | Resume skills examples | Resume achievement | How to make resume stand out

Title tag: How to make your Resume stand out- 6 Actionable Tips

Meta Tag: Do you want to showcase your capabilities & accomplishments to your potential employers, but do not know where to start from? Adding achievements & skills to your resume can increase your chances of creating a strong impression on your recruiters. Read this blog to know how you can do that.

Meta tag: A Comprehensive Guide to Making Your Resume Stand Out with Achievement & Skills | PaintMinds