

Reviews & Feedback: Storytelling for Effective Communication

“Stories are the one sure way I know to touch the heart and change the world.”

– Dorothy Allison

Stories have a unique ability to resonate deeply with people, stirring emotions, & sparking change. They connect us on a human level, allowing us to understand perspectives different from our own & empathize with experiences outside our immediate reality.

Stories are not just entertainment; they are vehicles for connection & change. Stories have the power to touch hearts, ignite emotions & stay etched in our memories forever.

Storytelling: Revolutionizing the Traditional Feedback Process

Performance Reviews traditionally include feedback & assessment of an employee's work for the organization. These reviews motivate employees to work harder or highlight areas of improvement & growth. Employees who receive feedback are more likely to turn over less by 14.9%. Hence, Performance reviews play an important role in shaping the career of an employee by providing relevant & accurate feedback at the right time.

Around 74% of the employees in the UK mention that traditional performance reviews are pointless. Therefore, using storytelling techniques in performance reviews can revolutionize the traditional feedback process by making it more engaging, insightful & memorable. Here are a few simple ways to incorporate storytelling in performance reviews.

1. Personal Connection: Stories can create a personal connection between the employer & employee. Instead of dry facts & figures, narratives can illustrate behaviors, achievements & areas for improvement in a relatable & memorable way.
2. Contextual Understanding: Stories allow feedback providers to set the context of what he intends to say. This contextual understanding helps the receiver prepare for

- the unexpected & can ease anxieties. Storytelling can help the receiver grasp the significance of their actions & behaviors.
3. Behavioral Examples - Stories can be used to highlight specific behaviors—both positive & negative. By infusing storytelling in real-life situations, the feedback provider can illustrate the impact of these behaviors on the team, projects, or organizational goals.
 4. Emotional Impact - Stories evoke emotions in the hearts of the listeners. These feelings can comprise of pride, motivation, empathy, or concern, making the feedback session more emotionally resonant & encouraging a deeper reflection from the receiver.
 5. Long-term Impact - Stories have a lasting impact. Stories are easy to remember because they are emotionally impactful & relatable. They tend to linger in the hearts & minds of the receivers. Therefore, stories can serve as ongoing references for improvement & growth, guiding the receiver for a long time.
 6. Collaboration - Incorporating storytelling turns the review into a collaborative dialogue rather than a one-sided assessment. The receiver is more likely to engage actively, ask questions & contribute their perspective when feedback is presented in the form of a story driven narrative leading to effective communication.

How to give effective feedback in Performance Review – A Step-by-Step Guide

- Prepare

Gather specific data that you wish to convey to your employees. They can be key aspects of the employee's performance, such as achievements, challenges, teamwork, leadership, or areas needing improvement.
